5 PILLARS

01 A combination of the right intra and extra curricular coursework, combined with an outstanding SAT/ACT score, alongside a few certification programs to ensure proficiency and academic experience.

02 Participating in and achieving academic awards at the national and international level have now become standards for top university admissions. Schools like CalTech, MIT, and others are now requiring national competition scores. Coaching and guidance on competitions make all the difference in the college application process.

03 Only a few of the thousands of internships carry any weight in the college admissions process. Don't waste thousands, or even tens of thousands of dollars for internships that have no bearing. We have decades of experience on proper engagement with industry leaders at highly

04 Community service is out, Community Engagement is the new big thing. We focus on helping students launch high impact initiatives that make a significant improvement to the most in-need with the community, while demonstrating soft skills across multiple cultures.

05 Outside of the classroom, internship, job, or research, how has your participation in the field materialized. Universities need to see future entrepreneurs, leaders, and inventors. Personal projects and portfolio development provide students with a convincing argument that they belong in competitive universities and majors.
